

BAFE SP101 - Competency of Portable Fire Extinguisher Organisations and Technicians: Certification Bodies List

Updated: 24th October 2018 (V6)

Organisations who wish to obtain BAFE registration must first implement a management system via either an ISO9001 (to the scope of BAFE SP101) certification or a management system audit (to the scope of BAFE SP101) certification from a UKAS accredited Certification Body.

The UKAS accredited certification bodies who offer certification to the BAFE SP101 Scheme are listed below.

Alcumus ISOQAR, BSI (British Standards Institution), IEC (Independent European Certification Ltd), LPCB (Loss Prevention Certification Board), NSI (National Security Inspectorate), SSAIB (Security Systems Alarm Inspection Board) and Socotec Certification International are the UKAS accredited Certification Bodies that are licensed to deliver this scheme and offer technical guidance. Once a company has achieved ISO 9001 (to the scope of SP101) or Management System audit certification (to the scope of SP101) they will need to complete a company application and technician application form/s (downloadable from the BAFE website www.bafe.org.uk) and forward to BAFE. Subject to details being satisfactory, BAFE will produce a certificate and release the relevant logos to promote your registration. The company will have its name placed on the National List of BAFE Registered Organisations, which is available online to the public free of charge or may be verified by reference on the BAFE website www.bafe.org.uk

Please note: As part of the BAFE SP101 scheme, BAFE and your chosen Certification Body will share organisation and technician data. This is stated in the scheme document (Clause 13.2 note 15 and Clause 15.1 note 1).
